

Demystifying Grant Budgets: A Beginner's Guide for Researchers

Part of a Nature Masterclasses on-demand webinar series

Are you working on securing funding for your next great research idea, conference visit or field trip? Maybe you have already identified your perfect funder after completing our course on "Finding Funding Opportunities" and have written a compelling application using tips shared in our "Persuasive Grant Writing" course.

The last task to complete before submitting your grant application is explaining to your funder how you would spend the funding you are asking for – in other words, you need to create a budget. But what expenses are eligible, what costs do you need to consider, what does your funder want to know and what is this "overhead" all about?

If you are struggling to get started with your first budget or want to refine your budgeting skills, come join our free webinar. Over 45 minutes funding expert Riana Coetsee will be sharing her top strategies so you can create a convincing and comprehensive budget for your next grant application.

The presenter

Riana is a research management and training consultant, specialising in skills development of early career researchers and grant writing support of researchers at all levels. She most recently held the position of Group Manager & Head: International & Early Career Research Grants at Stellenbosch University, South Africa. Since April 2020 she has offered virtual interactive research skills training to almost 1,000 researchers on the African continent. Riana is one of the experts who helped us create our on-demand training course "Finding Funding Opportunities".
